

Separation and divorce is an emotional and confusing time. Since no two cases are the same, Ashley takes the time to understand her client's concerns, but more importantly to explain all of their options. She is a believer in the collaborative method, which seeks settlement versus courtroom litigation. She believes this is the best option for her clients financially, but even more importantly, for the children when they are involved. However, when collaboration and compromise are not options, Ashley will aggressively advocate for her clients in the courtroom.

Ashley is a volunteer attorney with Safe Alliance and represents victims of domestic violence against their abusers. In April 2015, she received the "Commitment to Justice" Award for her contributions to the Legal Representation Project.

Ashley is originally from Atlantis, Florida, but relocated to Charlotte in 2011. In her free time, she enjoys spending time with family, friends, her dogs, and cheering on the Florida State Seminoles.
