

As the youngest of a blended family of five children, Andria understands the difficulties related to the separation and combining of families. Andria attended Wake Forest University School of Law knowing that she would one day be practicing family law. While in law school, Andria took part in the Child Advocacy Clinic, where she acted as Guardian ad Litem for children involved in domestic violence and high-conflict custody cases. She focused her law school studies on family law, taking courses such as the family law seminar, advanced family law, and litigation clinic. At graduation, Andria was selected as the recipient of the North Carolina Chapter Law Student Award from the American Academy of Matrimonial Lawyers. After graduating, she immediately began to follow her passion by practicing family law. Whether mediation or litigation is the best route to resolve your case, Andria will ensure that you are educated and fully prepared every step of the way.

When Andria is not working, she enjoys spending time with her family and hiking in the mountains with her husband and their dog, Lola.
